INTRODUCTION

FILMS, SLIDES, AND RECORDINGS about drug abuse can be very helpful to anyone trying to get a message across to a specific audience. Combining sight and sound in unique ways, good audiovisuals have great power to arouse feelings and demonstrate concepts.

There are plenty of audiovisuals on the subject of drug abuse. However, it is not always easy to find an audiovisual on the drug abuse topic you want or, if you have found one, to know its potential impact on your intended audience. This publication is designed to help you get that information.

In your search for an audiovisual on drug abuse, a good way to start is to consult one of the evaluation services listed and described here. Although there are not many of them and they have not, for the most part, evaluated new items, they can provide good evaluations for most of the older films; and one evaluation service can review new materials on request. Reading film evaluations is an excellent way to find films designed for your intended audience and appropriate for your program goals.

If no evaluation exists for the film you want, you may be able to find the film itself, or advice about it, in a film library. We have included a list of film libraries, which is not intended to be comprehensive but, rather, a stimulus for further searching. Suggestions for finding other library sources are also included.

To help the National Institute on Drug Abuse (NIDA) keep up to date, let us know if you are aware of any sources for drug abuse audiovisuals and evaluation services not mentioned here. Write to Public Information Specialist, Audiovisual Section, Communications Services Branch, Office of Communications, NIDA, Room 110, 11400 Rockville Pike, Rockville, Md. 20852, or call (301) 443-6500. Include the name and address of the distributor or evaluator, the name of the product distributed, and, if possible, a description of the product or the evaluative service.

EVALUATORS OF DRUG ABUSE AUDIOVISUALS

A SMALL NUMBER OF ORGANIZATIONS conduct regular evaluations of drug abuse audiovisuals. They are listed below in alphabetical order, with descriptions of their services and methods of evaluation. Each service will be glad to inform you in detail of its services, subscription costs, if any, mailing list, or other information.

Addiction Research Foundation (ARF)
33 Russell St.
Toronto, Ontario
Canada M5S 2S1

THE ARF OPERATES an audiovisual review service which has evaluated over 160 films on drugs and alcohol since its first session on November 24, 1971. The assessments are published from time to time under the series title, Projection. Each assessment gives such details as price, running time, and the distributor's name and address. (Since the ARF is an agency of the Providence of Ontario, many addresses show Canadian branches of United States firms.) Each evaluation includes a synopsis, an assessment of the item's scientific accuracy, a general evaluation, and recommended use. Recommendations are made as to whether or not ARF should endorse the item, whether or not it is suitable for broadcast, and what type of audience, if any, it is most appropriate for. The ARF's Audio-Visual Assessment Group, which reviews the films, is made of representatives of all the Foundation's regions and its general clinical, educational, and research division.

Iowa Drug Abuse Information Center
Cedar Rapids Public Library
428 3rd Ave., S.E.
Cedar Rapids, Iowa 52401
Attn: Craig Wunderlich
(319) 398-5123

THE IOWA DRUG ABUSE INFORMATION CENTER has on file over 500 different reviews of 16mm films on drug and alcohol abuse. (The number of films reviewed is somewhat less than 500 since some were reviewed more than once.) Evaluations were drawn from other agencies, as well as being performed by individuals in the Iowa facility. You may write or call for evaluations; because of demand, no more than three evaluations are given to each requester.

Mental Health Materials Center
419 Park Avenue South
New York, N.Y. 10016
(212) 889-5760

THE CENTER PUBLISHES a bimonthly newsletter, Sneak Preview, which covers films on all mental health topics and is available by subscription. The evaluation panel consists of 20-30 members of agencies in New York; the panel members are experienced in showing and evaluating films. The Human Resources Information System, also available to subscribers, is a continuing series of evaluations of print and nonprint items. Evaluations chosen from the system have been collected in a book, Selective Guide to Materials for Mental Health and Family Life Education. Each evaluation includes a synopsis, appropriate audience, and details such as price and ordering information.

National Institute on Drug Abuse
Pretest Service
Room 110, 11400 Rockville Pike
Rockville, Md. 20852
(301) 443-6500

A FREE EVALUATION SERVICE is provided for organizations wishing a review of materials, including those in prerelease form. The purpose of the service is to provide a timely critique of the technical accuracy, suitability, and audience reaction to drug materials. Each evaluation begins with comments by the expert review panel, who are professionals brought in, as appropriate, from medicine, law, education, and other fields. Test audience comments, which follow, are made by a small group representing the intended audience. A summary and conclusions section summarizes all comments and includes any recommendations and/or suggested revisions. The evaluation is sent to the requesting organization within about 3 weeks of receiving the material. Evaluations are not released outside the requesting organization.

National Coordinating Council on Drug Education
1526 18th St., N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20036
(202) 332-1512

THE COORDINATING COUNCIL has published Drug Abuse Films, Third Edition, a book containing reviews of 192 audiovisuals produced up to 1972. Each item was reviewed by an expert panel and an audience panel for scientific accuracy, clarity of message, degree to which the work holds the attention of the assumed audience, and seven other criteria. Synopses, evaluations, and details are given for all items. They are grouped broadly into "Recommended," "Restricted," and "Unacceptable" categories.

Two other services of the Council are: Grassroots, a periodical information service including evaluations of audiovisuals, and National Drug Reporter, a monthly newsletter including evaluations of new materials.

THE PYRAMID PROJECT offers technical assistance for prevention programs and is supported by the National Institute on Drug Abuse. The Project gives evaluation services of various kinds and publishes a free newsletter, Prevention Resource Bulletin. The newsletter contains frequent reviews of audiovisuals and descriptions of broadcast materials produced by various agencies.

Wisconsin Substance Abuse Clearinghouse
420 North Lake
Madison, Wis. 53706
Attn: John Siegfried
(608) 263-3653

IN 1973, AND AGAIN IN 1975, a Film Evaluation Committee of adults and youth reviewed a total of 86 films on drugs and alcohol, some intended specifically for black audiences. The reviews were published in two parts under the title, Evaluation of Drug Education Films by Wisconsin Adults and Students. Each review lists the film's price, running time, and source, but does not summarize the film. The 1973 edition and 1975 supplement are available from the above address. There may be a small charge for the publications. Evaluations of individual items from the publications may be arranged for by phone.

Occasional reviews of drug abuse audiovisuals, written by individual authors, appear in the following specialized magazines, which may be on file at your public library, a nearby college library, or with a public school audiovisual specialist. As their titles suggest, they deal with many aspects of the film world as well as with education.

FILM LIBRARIES

ONE INEXPENSIVE SOURCE of audiovisuals is the film library, whether commercially operated or run by a school, university, or local government. Although film libraries do not often have a large selection of drug abuse films, all of them are available on a free loan basis. A few of the many film libraries which have drug films are listed below:

American Hospital Association Film Library
840 N. Lake Shore Dr.
Chicago, Ill. 60601

Audiovisual Support Centers
Army installations throughout the United States

Extension Media Center
University of California
2223 Fulton St.
Berkeley, Calif. 94720
(Note: A rental fee is charged out of State)

Modern Talking Picture Service, Inc.
1212 Avenue of the Americas
New York, N.Y. 10036
(and branches in major cities)

Check the film library of your school system, or your county or municipal public library, for drug films. A local library may be able to get a drug film from a distant library through interlibrary loan, at no cost. The film library's audiovisual specialist may be able to recommend drug films. Although he may not be able to vouch for their technical accuracy, he can tell you running time, intended audiences, and, perhaps, reactions from previous audiences.

COMMERCIAL AND NONPROFIT DISTRIBUTORS

AT SOME POINT IN YOUR SEARCH for audiovisuals you will need to contact the organizations that distribute them. They include commercial firms, trade associations, agencies of local governments, religious organizations, and universities. They can provide information on sales and rental prices, the availability of preview prints, and, perhaps, plans for future films. You may wish to get on the mailing lists of a number of distributors. Some handle many films on a variety of topics, while others deal with only one item.

Opposite the name of each distributor is the name of the audiovisual distributed. This listing has several purposes beyond the obvious one of showing who distributes what product. Another aim is to show, by the word "others" after some title, which of the distributors handles a group of films. The titles listed opposite those distributors are films already evaluated or representative of the distributor's output.

It should be noted that the appearance of a distributor on the list does not imply either endorsement or criticism of the product by the National Institute on Drug Abuse.
